Attached is a slightly more updated drawing of what's in the Uhaul.

Also attached, is a drawing of the layout I recommend if your storage unit is a 10'x20' rectangle. Don't worry, it took me less than 5 minutes to draw the storage unit layout.

I recommend the one aisle down the middle with the three large shelves, and the smaller shelves along the outer edges. The large shelves are less likely to tip over so they should be the ones freestanding in the middle. This is basically the layout we had here in our 10'x15' unit.

Although there are several sizes of boxes you'll receive, they can really be broken down into two categories: long and short. The long boxes are either 24" or 26" (those are inside dimensions so they are actually a bit bigger than that) long and should be placed on the large shelves. You'll completely fill up the large shelves. The short boxes all fit on the smaller shelves but won't completely fill them up.

Not all of the individual shelf slots are the same height. Some are a couple inches higher than the others. You'll need to put the 16x13x13 boxes on the shelf slots that are slightly higher than the others. If that doesn't make sense, don't worry, you'll figure it out.

By the way, I stuck a label with the nominal box size on each box (and they're color-coded). You'll figure it out.

Sorry, but I shipped you 4 filing cabinets that are also full of material (ran out of time to repack them).

I think this should take your movers a maximum of 3 hours. It's pretty easy work for them, but very hard for those of us that don't lift lots of heavy objects every day.
