Bill would require cigarette firms to pay medical expenses of certain smokers

Legislation to require cigarette manufacturers to pay the medical expenses of long-time smokers who die of lung cancer or emphysema has been introduced in Illinois.

The sponsor, State Sen. Bob Kustra (R, Des Plaines), said the legislation was patterned after the strict liability imposed on taverns and liquor stores for alcohol-related accidents caused by their patrons.

"The bill's intent is to shift the burden of the costs of cigarette smoking from the general taxpaying population to those who cause these diseases — the cigarette manufacturers," he said. The proposal also would allow the Illinois Dept. of Public Aid to recover medical expenses for welfare recipients who die of lung cancer or emphysema. Kustra said the state annually paid more than $10 million in hospital bills for these patients.

UPDATE ON THE COLLEGE PROJECT'S PROGRESS

Over a year ago, we reported on the Wernher von Braun University Foundation's plan to try to raise $15 million to start a technological college in the South. This conservative group is apparently defunct; it does not answer its mail, and has let its option on a campus lapse. It never, apparently got the attention of the Coors Bros., which it was counting on, & they have just announced a scholarship fund for the children of those who died in Vietnam.

(With any luck, they will be besieged with applications from Eurasians who are illegitimate sons or daughters of the American troops in Vietnam.)

Now, that leaves us with an opportunity. Is there a need for an explicitly libertarian college, and, if so, is it possible to raise the money to start one?

QED, c/o Messenger has a mimeographed study of the feasibility of such a project, for those who are seriously interested. Suggestions are greatly appreciated.

Whether or not the project proves feasible, the possibility must be explored. Even negative results are highly useful information. — jh Ambitious Chinese saw that the time was ripe for domination of the world by gun-carrying ships. They pulled their high technology together and built dozens of large sailing junks with multiple masts, steered by sternpost rudders, navigated by magnetic compasses, and armed with guns. In A.D. 1405 a powerful fleet set off to impress the barbarians, and a succession of expeditions overawed half the known world, gathering treasure from as far away as Mecca and Africa. Had that naval policy persisted, this book would be written in Chinese. Officials and accountants persuaded the emperor after less than thirty years to put a stop to it, and eventually they destroyed even the records of the voyages. It was bureaucracy's most breathtaking accomplishment.

Free Individuals Know Best

Gary Hart's call for "a new patriotism" and mandatory national service for young people simply underlines what all the left wing politics is—the politics of slavery.

Sen. Hart apparently thinks that our young people aren't wise enough or worthy enough to decide for themselves how to run their own lives. He would take them from their homes and let a bunch of bureaucrats decide how these teen-agers would spend their time. Just because these youngsters were born when they were, for some reason they owe the government control over their lives.

WELL, IF A PERSON truly wants to provide a service for the government, or anyone, he certainly should be allowed to voluntarily do so. But what right does the government have to tell our teen-agers, "Either you will serve us or we'll put you in jail?" This is the most inhumane attitude a "compassionate" man like Sen. Hart could have.

Hart's type of "compassion" is the same kind of compassion of Lyndon Johnson, the president who forced young men to fight and die in Vietnam. Hart claims to oppose military intervention, but if elected, you can bet your boots he'll use his flocks of young slaves for military intervention somewhere abroad.

This policy of compulsory national service is the kind of program we would expect from Adolf Hitler or Josef Stalin—not from the nation founded by George Washington and Thomas Jefferson.

AMERICA WAS FOUNDED by persons who believed that the individual knows what is best for himself. These "selfish" individuals fostered the strongest, most prosperous nation in human history.

Slaves make lousy defenders of freedom. A true patriot, a true lover of freedom knows that involuntary servitude of this type does not increase social responsibility—just dependence upon government largess.

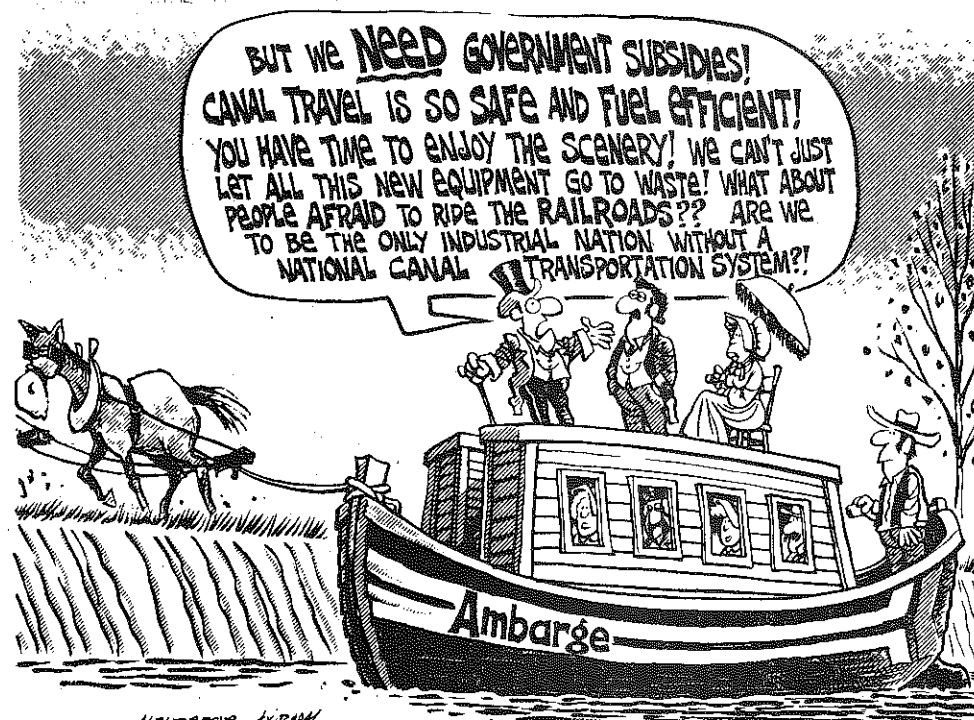

In a free society, free people should decide for themselves how to preserve freedom.

"Many Americans . . . have forgotten—or perhaps the public schools no longer teach—that the American Revolution was so fundamentally Libertarian in its origins. The Revolution was neither 'Liberal' or 'Conservative' in any modern meaning of those terms. There were no distinctions between what some people today call civil rights and property rights. Human rights were inseparable. According to the founding fathers and their teachers, rights of individuals to use and dispose of real and personal property were no different than the rights associated with personal conscience and freedom of speech."

DO WE NEED ORGANIZED LIBERTARIAN STUDENTS?

Have you ever stopped to consider the importance of the libertarian student movement? If you have never given thought to this question in the past, perhaps you should now. The future of the libertarian movement may depend upon your answer.

A recent article in a major Midwest daily newspaper made note of a growing phenomena that should provide us all cause for concern. The article made note of the fact that there are now more than 80 conservative newspapers published on college campuses around the country. These periodicals are not published by adults, but rather by conservative students who are receiving substantial funding from adult sponsors. In one case cited, upwards of $10,000 was being provided conservative students to publish a campus newspaper.

The right is not the only group organizing on campuses. The left has long recognized the importance of students and youth as a group. Virtually every left wing sect devotes resources to publishing an outreach newspaper. Using their own publications, conservatives and leftists, student and adult alike, are moving to attract young people.

And we libertarians? Two times in recent years the NatCom of the Libertarian Party (LP) has considered forming a youth group, but decided in the end against it. Though the reasons were varied, for young libertarians like myself the result was the same: We had no organization to back us up on campus.

Now somebody has taken positive action to address our movement's lack of a youth group. Founded in 1982, the Libertarian Student Network (LSN) has recently embarked on an ambitious program to fight the left and the right for the hearts and minds of our nation's young people. Through its outreach newspaper, YOUNG LIBERTARIAN, the LSN is moving to attract students to the libertarian cause. And meeting with success. During the last month the LSN has nearly doubled in size, and all indications point to a 25-campus network by this fall. Clearly the LSN is doing good things, positive things, on behalf of our movement, and activists such as myself.

How long the LSN will be able to carry the libertarian banner is another question altogether. One point is without dispute: Without adult support the LSN cannot long continue to publish YOUNG LIBERTARIAN for distribution to students. The LSN needs your support to succeed. How much support? You may be surprised at learning how little is needed to publish YOUNG LIBERTARIAN. $3,000, a mere pittance compared to what the left and the right spend, will allow the LSN to publish YOUNG LIBERTARIAN on a quarterly basis. $5,000 will allow the LSN to increase its frequency of publication and distribute hundreds of copies of Murray Rothbard's "For A New Liberty" into the hands of interested students.

I am sure you will agree this is not a large amount of money when one considers the benefits our movement will accrue from such a group. Many LP leaders graduated to their current positions from student organizations. If our movement is to survive and grow there will have to be others in the future.

Now that you have had time to consider my original question there are three things you can do. One, you can subscribe to YOUNG LIBERTARIAN. At $5 a year it is one of the best bargains around. Two, you can make a one-time donation or pledge a specified amount every issue. One former student libertarian, now a member of the work force, pledged $1,000 to the LSN recently, reducing to $2,000 the amount needed to publish YOUNG LIBERTARIAN quarterly. Finally, you can tell young libertarians in your area about the LSN, and have them tie into the campus network.

We face an uphill battle when we take on the statist. Building an effective student group will make that battle easier for us all.

Ravenel raps Senate for exception to rule

After returning from lunch Thursday, senators voted 18-6 to refuse to apply a rule requiring full attendance at debate.

Some senators tried to invoke the rule that calls for the S.C. Highway Patrol to bring in lawmakers who were voluntarily absent from discussions of the 1985-86 state budget.

The resulting vote drew the ire of Sen. Arthur Ravenel, R-Charleston.

"This is ridiculous," Ravenel said, "What do the people think of us?"

Ravenel asked his colleagues why they would vote against enforcement of the rule "to lock the door and don't let senators go running out. Let's stop making ourselves look like a bunch of jackasses."

Increased taxation akin to socialism

Our state is on the rise again. Check good ol' boy salaries, spending and taxes.

The massive federal deficit should dictate reduced spending, but our lawmakers of this prosperous state (48th in per capita income) increase the state budget and spending by 30 percent to $2.8 billion (excluding federal dollars). The people's representatives further burden families with sleight-of-hand taxes; for example, tax simplification (cost, $200); repeal of food tax credit ($50); gas tax increase ($30). They are silently moving to protect gas prices similar to milk (set prices) to cost citizens $25 million dollars. Higher essential needs costs keep citizens from economy-strengthening spending. Our lawmakers should wake up.

I thought slavery was abolished a century ago, but it seems the plantation-owner concept now rules in government. Our uncontrolled government spending now consumes nearly 50 percent of current income. The spend/tax mentality being displayed in all levels of government is counterproductive. High taxation is stagnation turned to socialism.

STILL WAITING FOR JUSTICE

I've heard some amazing examples of "the law's delays," but what about the awful case of Barry Carliell?

As I reported at the time, 36-year-old Barry was taken to Upper Street police station in Islington, London, last April 29 after an argument in a restaurant. He left the station covered in blood with his left eye hanging out of its socket. The eye was removed at Moorfields Eye Hospital. Barry was not charged with anything.

PC Brian Renton was charged with causing him grievous bodily harm. Barry was to be a witness for the prosecution. He was first warned the case was coming up at Southwark Crown Court on November 14. Then he got a telephone call to say the case had been postponed because Mr. Renton's lawyers needed more time for the defense.

He was told it was definitely going to start on December 12. "I really got hyped up for it this time" says Barry. He was rung up on December 9 by Scotland Yard. Sorry, the case was postponed again.

After Christmas, Barry was told the case was absolutely definitely on in February or March.

Owner

Last week, he got another date—May 8:

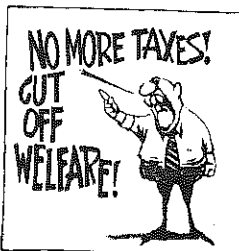

more than a year after the event.

Scotland Yard say "The case has been adjourned for various legal reasons."

Barry has had to give up his work as owner of a small garage and car repair business. He did almost all the work himself, and he can't see well enough to do it any more. He lives on £24.80 a week supplementary benefit.

Any claim for compensation has to wait for the result of the criminal case.

PC Brian Renton is suspended on full pay.

THERE SHOULD BE GOLD & SILVER STOCK IN YOUR FUTURE

By Robert J Chapman, Investors International Securities, 32123 Lindero Canyon Rd. #300, Westlake Village, California 91361.

Gold's value is a reflection of other events, the mirror of international tensions and a barometer of fear. It registers in dollar terms the anxiety level of world events. Gold is money, the only real money there is. It has no price. It measures the direction of all other prices. It would seem to me, looking at the direction in which international governments are headed, that a level of stability, both political and economic, is some way off.

Protection of one's assets is the individual's first line of defense when faced with the inflation-deflation syndrome created by our bankers. For the past 23 years I have unchangingly felt that gold and silver stocks have been the best protective device; owning the stocks when inflation and world events prompted it and being short these stocks when the storm subsided.

Historically gold and silver stocks have only had interrupted trading world-wide for several days at a time. On the other hand, governments have over and over again confiscated gold and silver bullion and coins. This is because the bankers and politicians usually use the gold stocks as one of their vehicles to wealth. As an example, in 1933-35 when coins were forcibly collected by our government, Homestake Mining stock went from $4. to $400. per share.

During the 1977-80 period gold stocks outperformed bullion by anywhere from 3 to 40 times. Gold began its bull market in 1968. Since that time the stocks have gone up approximately 40 times more than bullion, not taking into account dividends.

There has always been an open and free market in gold stocks, making them cash-liquid on any trading day. All South African and many U. S., Canadian, Australian gold stocks can be bought and sold on some 40 stock exchanges throughout the world.

Enormous leverage exists in gold and silver stocks without using margin. It costs no more for a mine to produce gold whether gold is $400. per ounce or $800. per ounce. The mine has a set cost, which increases with inflation.

Historically South African mines have paid dividends varying for 5% to 30%, depending on the stock. North American mines have paid very small dividends, taking the profits and plowing them back into the companies for further development and growth; two decidedly different concepts of management objectives.

The potential for the future in gold stocks, needless to say, is tied to gold's price. An interesting history shows that only a handful of people throughout the world own either gold or gold stocks, perhaps only 3% to 5% in wealthy countries. If this percentage were to be changed to only 10%, a dramatic change in gold and gold share prices would occur. If the cash-rich OPEC countries or pension and profit-sharing plans or insurance companies put just 5% of their assets in gold or gold stocks, the price would explode.

Of all the gold-related investment vehicles, the gold stocks particularly the South Africans, have been purchased by the most astute, sophisticated investors. These are not plungers, but observers of the world economic and political climate; hence, the stocks usually run ahead of bullion on the way up and the same on the way down. Consequently, if one is to invest in gold stocks, he or she should seek someone out as a broker who has specialized in those stocks for some time.

Our present political situation is disastrous, as usual. Supply-side economics has been abandoned. It was never meant to succeed. How could it with our indestructible welfare state, budget deficits of $200 billion, trade deficits of $175 billion and government intervention in the free market? Then there were those "now you see it; now you don't" tax cuts: increases. Mr. Reagan must have learned those as he sat out WWII on the Culver City lot. Harsh, but true. He has 65 Trilateralists as advisers, more than any previous president.

Rep. Ron Paul said recently at the Duck Financial Conference in Costa Rica that, "Our government is in a state of collapse." He's right, and let me give you some of the reasons.

The Federal Reserve Board, controlled by David Rockefeller's Council of Foreign Relations and his Trilateral Commission in league with other major bankers, is implementing a controlled monetary collapse.

The F. R. B. has agreed to bail out The $1.7 billion Euromarket created by the Swiss and British bankers. If this isn't staggering enough, they also, through the Monetary Control Act, will bail out the major world banks' loans of $1 trillion to the Third World and communist countries. The credits created by the Fed to pay off these debts will cause inflation in excess of 20% in 1986. These factors alone should push gold well into the thousands of dollars per ounce area and silver over $100 per ounce.

Make no mistake; every Third World country and communist country will default on its debt. Mexico will be followed by Argentina, Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Zaire, Zambia, Tanzania, then Poland, Romania, and Yugoslavia. There are scores of countries that are technically in default right now. It is only a matter of taking them one at a time in order to keep the whole edifice from collapsing. The Monetary Control Act of 1980 that makes all this possible was passed by a 380 to 13 margin. Most of the Congressmen who voted for this bill never read it, and even if they had, most of them would not have understood it. This act is the most inflationary piece of legislation ever passed. It allows the Fed to bail out the world. Not only can the Fed monetize the Euro-dollar debt and the debts of other nations, but it can also monetize Municipal Bond debt. Since the enactment of this legislation, it has been used over 70 times for foreign debt purchase. That surprises you doesn't it? They just don't tell you about it. You don't have a need to know. I might add here that the inflation that will be caused by the Monetary Control Act will, in and of itself, stop any deflationary aspirations the world economy might have over the next 10 years. The deflationists are dead wrong. They do not understand the conspiracy. This is a battle of psychopolitical warfare, the result of which is economic warfare. Some day they will be right, but not now. We are not to the cracking point as yet. If you follow the deflationary theorists you will miss an enormous opportunity to protect your assets and perhaps to make a cushion of additional profits to keep yourself financially afloat for the future.

Steps to outlaw terrorism

Panama City Florida NEWS-HERALD 20 Jan 1985
ROBERT LEFEVRE
 Libertarian Writer

I have been advised by the media that Ronald Reagan is taking steps to outlaw terrorism. Clearly it would be a good thing if terrorism could be exorcised. To compel a change of opinion or behavior by scaring people through a display of violence seems like something that should have been left behind during the Dark Ages. But it wasn't. We read or hear stories about terrorism nearly every day.

Currently, the most blatant example of continuing terrorism is the United States is the rash of bombings occurring at abortion clinics. It seems that there is divided opinion in this country concerning abortions. Some believe that any abortion is murder and that murder should be punished in every case. Others believe that the individual woman is the rightful decision-maker concerning her own actions. This group today contains the victims of the new terror and those believing the contrary have within their ranks the impatient purveyors of the new terror.

It is clear that everyone who opposes abortions is not automatically a terrorist. Similarly, it is obvious that those who believe in the rights of women, are not automatically victims. A minority practices the crime of terror. Another minority is victimized.

Because of the publicity on the bombings of abortion clinics it appears that some in this country think that the current insanity marks a new low in Americana. Until now, I have read in some stories, America has been free of terrorism. But at last it has come to live among us.

If you happen to be black, you know better. The Ku Klux Klan was born as an instrument designed to terrorize blacks. Its impact on those it selects as targets is the same today as it was before the Civil War. By physical example, including burning crosses, dumped garbage, broken windows, and various acts of vandalism, the KKK modus vivendi warns its targets that it won't hesitate to inflict physical violence unless compliance is forthcoming.

The KKK today, is, at least publicly, out of favor. It is undoubtedly much larger than is generally believed; albeit much smaller than it was at one time. Certainly, its actions of the past continued over to the present are vicious, undisciplined and wholly to be regretted.

There is still another neo-terrorist outfit, much smaller in numbers but equally militant in employing violence, which has recently shouldered its way into headlines. This is a Jewish protectionist group which has taken up the task of inflicting terror on some who have desecrated synagogues or who are believed to dispute some of the claims made by Jews concerning the holocaust of WW II.

Additionally, we are aware that terror is in store for Turks who are said to have murdered thousands of Armenians. Hate groups which practice terror in various ways are in this country and have been here for quite a few years.

By no means is this the end of the list. The Trade Union movement, in its beginnings nearly 150 years ago relied on terrorism to win its arguments. It still does, but not as often.

Today unions have the appearance of civilization. They seem to be more tractable, less given to the employment of stark fear. Let us fondly hope that this is more than a temporary, cosmetic smile.

But there is one instrument of terror in this land that we usually do not think of as terrorist. Yet the amount of fear it engenders annually probably tops the anxiety list. This is an agency of the Federal Government known as the Internal Revenue Service.

This agency doesn't burn crosses. It doesn't blow your front porch away with dynamite. It isn't going to up-end your car, smash the windows or slash the tires. It isn't going to beat you up. Oh, my goodness, no!

It is going to take away your hope to better yourself. More and more of what you make will disappear into this cavernous maw. It is going to take away your home rather than vandalize it. It is going to confiscate your car with its windows and tires intact. It is going to kill your ambition and reduce you to a level where you become impotent to raise your head above that of your neighbors.

And if you show signs of fighting it is going to tie up your business, rupture all your plans, investigate and rule over you in every particular. It has become and is your slave master. And you will report to it and do as it tells you. Failure to do so will wipe you out.

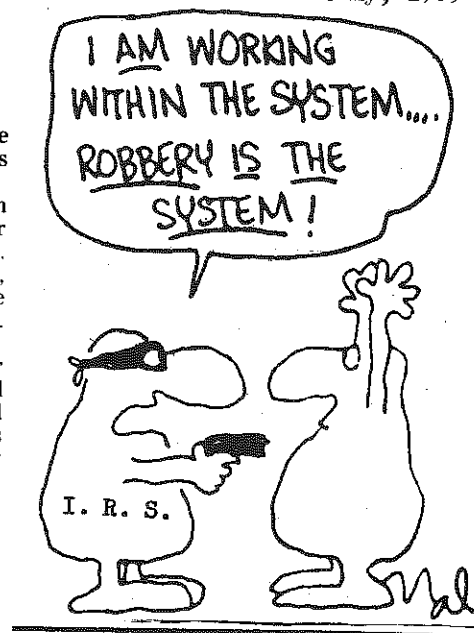

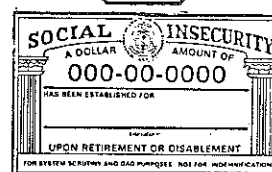

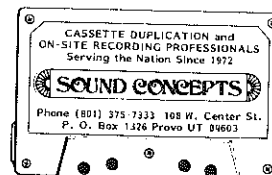

All this will be done with good manners, clean shirts and ties and the fish-like stare of automatons, most of whom have now been taught how to use a firearm. Just in case, you understand?

This is a kind of terror which doesn't usually make the headlines. It is the quiet, calm of the torturer who knows that he is legally on solid ground when he does what he was ordered to do. This is the Inquisition of Torquemada who smiles and prays for your soul while putting you on the rack for your own good.

If Reagan is really sincere about wanting to abolish terrorism, he might like to begin here.

(The author, former editor of the Colorado Springs Gazette-Telegraph, is a libertarian writer living in Orange, Calif.)

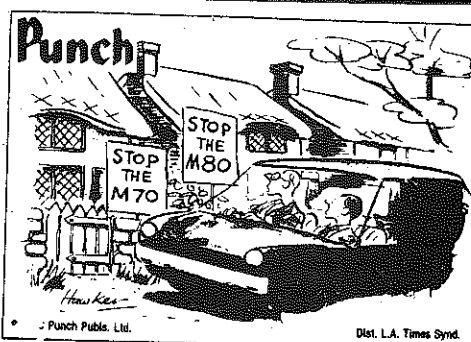

Not since Confederate Gen. Jubal A. Early threatened to capture Washington in 1864 — maybe not even since the British burned the Capitol in 1814 — has there been such hysteria along the Potomac. If the Federal budget deficit is not cut drastically, everyone from President Reagan on down seems to be saying, the skies — maybe even the Republic — will fall.

THERE SHOULD BE GOLD & SILVER STOCK, continued

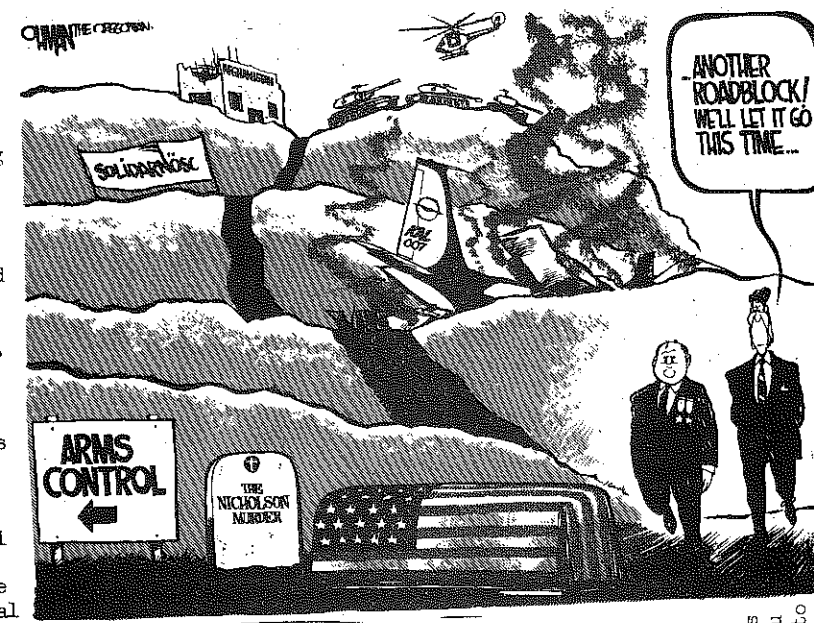

Can you believe the Omnibus Banking Bill was passed by a voice vote, that is the votes were not recorded, at 10:30 at night? Just as the Federal Reserve Act was in 1913, late at night just before Christmas. This bill allows the government insuring agencies, FDIC and FSLIC, to bail out any company which controls or contemplates controlling a bank or savings & loan. Guess who supplies the cash? You are right — the Fed. This means in times of emergency the Fed has the power to force mergers and takeovers of other financial institutions. This will allow the major Trilateralist-CFR banks such as Citibank, Chase Manhattan, Manufacturers Hanover, etc. to pick up all the small banks and savings & loans in the country for 25¢ on the dollar, under the guise of a financial emergency which they in fact created themselves. The first instance of this being used was in the forced merger of a major San Francisco savings & loan into Citibank. In effect this bill will cause the demise of banking as we know it in America. Several major institutions will control all banking. It will also cause an end to the underground economy. It will make it impossible to function, thereby controlling all of our financial lives. With this, it will control us totally. George Orwell was right. His timing was just off a little. This is also going to allow these megabanks to form Bank Service Corporations, which will vastly expand their non-banking activity into insurance, mortgage banking, commercial data processing, real estate and owning stock brokerage houses; all of which they have heretofore been prohibited from doing. Of these two pieces of legislation, I do not know which is worse. Simply put: we have been had again.

And if the aforementioned bills were not enough, they were topped by the passage 3 years earlier of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act. Essentially this bill allows the President to implement foreign exchange controls over all foreign exchange transactions, assets and property. As I returned by plane from the Duck Conference lately, I was really surprised to see many signs telling you to declare anything that could be of monetary value over $5000. No signs were seen telling you that you could bring in only $300. worth of foreign goods. The big push is to let you know that your government is watching you and your money. This act was enacted to allow our government to find and control all your assets.

I should add here that the above 3 pieces of legislation will be very instrumental in a number of ways in causing gold particularly and silver to go to historic highs. All the bills are highly inflationary and may not be totally implemented for some time. The only solution now is partial expansion of banking activities by the majors and partial money control. This phase should end in 1986-7 to be followed by a new phase into the early 1990s for further implementations. This means another bull market in gold will follow the one we are currently in. The exception to this projection would be if we could stop these criminals in their tracks. Only time will tell.

Forecasting is a dangerous game where the experts are right only one-third of the time; and here I have attempted to take you into the early 1990s. I guess the U. S. government made a terrible mistake by training me in counterintelligence. Be as it may, I have seen so many poor projections from conservative letter writers and, of course, the planned failure projections of people like Wharton Econometrics, Chase Econometrics, Data Resources and U. S. government agencies, who have consistently produced absurd forecasts that I felt I certainly had to do better than they did.

(In 1984 I see a 13% prime rate. The Fed has drained the world economy since January 1980, as much as it dares. We have been going downhill economically for almost 3 years. The American people will only take so much and the Fed realizes this. Hence our cycles. These rates should generally hold out into the November 1984 elections. This is contrary to almost everything you read, but it's my opinion. Late 1984 should have a 5-6% inflation rate that the government admits to. Gold should trade between $335. and $360. per ounce conservatively; silver between $7 and $8 per ounce.)

1985 should bring 10%+ inflation, $1000. gold and $50. silver. These projections, if correct, will bring astronomical gains in gold and silver stocks. The leverage is enormous. Stocks in either gold or silver companies that are now selling for $4. could go to $400. a share. Time will tell. It is my opinion this will all come to pass, and it may not be the last big bull market. If I am right, this one will do fine.

IRS officer assaulted

ANDREWS
 An Andrews resident has been released on bond after her arrest for assaulting a federal officer, according to U.S. Attorney Henry D. McMaster.

A federal magistrate in Florence set bond at $10,000 for Burnesia Bouchette after an assault last week on Patrick J. Downey, a revenue officer with the Internal Revenue Service.

Mrs. Bouchette is charged with firing a shotgun at Downey as he was leaving her property May 8. She faces a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison, a $250,000 fine, or both, McMaster said.

And she missed!

Zany Canadian Rhino Party Calls It Quits

MONTREAL (AP) — Loyal followers of the Rhinoceros Party, deciding their satirical movement should not outlive its founder, put more than two decades of zany political theater to rest Tuesday in not-very-solemn ceremonies.

Inventive Rhino campaign promises — to repeal the law of gravity, pay off Canada's public debt with an American Express card and nationalize hockey star Guy Lafleur — were remarkably successful in attracting attention and even votes from Canadians.

But party leaders said they had decided years ago that the party should be buried with its inventor, Jacques Ferron, a physician, acclaimed novelist and promoter of independence for Quebec who died a week ago at age 64.

"He taught us the power of positive absurdity in the face of absolute idiocies," said Charlie McKenzie, the Rhino party president. "He taught us that we could best become a free nation by acting as a free people."

Upstairs at a seedy Montreal bar called "Les Foufoules Electrique," or "The Electric Fanny," McKenzie told a crowd of reporters that after Ferron's death, the party would be "following in his footsteps, founding with our founder."

With a straight face, the 42-year-old freelance journalist insisted that many Rhino campaign planks had entered the political mainstream over the years.

"We were the only political party to promise rock videos, 24 hours a day, seven days a week," McKenzie said. "Today, that is a reality."

He said party members were burying the institution "not with our heads bowed low, but our horns held high, mindful that — after 22 years in the muddled trenches of front-line politics — we have preserved our dignity and avoided the ultimate humiliation of being elected to public office."

But the Rhinos came close, running second in two of Canada's 282 parliamentary districts in the 1980 election to the intense dismay of the Conservatives, who came in third. The Rhinos gained official status as a recognized party, including guaranteed free television time during campaigns to get the message across.

Ferron, one of French Canada's most honored writers, created the party in 1963. At first it participated only in Quebec's provincial politics, but then it spread nationwide.

In October 1970, Ferron became the intermediary between authorities and terrorists of the Front de Liberation du Quebec who had kidnapped and murdered a government official, arranging their surrender.

Since 1979, the party's nominal leader has been Cornelius I., a rhinoceros born in Granby, Quebec, now living in the San Diego Zoo.

"For good and faithful service, Cornelius I is named Leader-in-Exile and delegated to serve in perpetuity as our token envoy to the western White House," McKenzie intoned, as two other party officials held burning sparklers.

The Montreal Gazette bid a sad farewell to the Rhinoceros Party in an editorial tribute.

"Heaven knows, Canadian politics needs their bizarre wit as much as ever," the paper wrote.

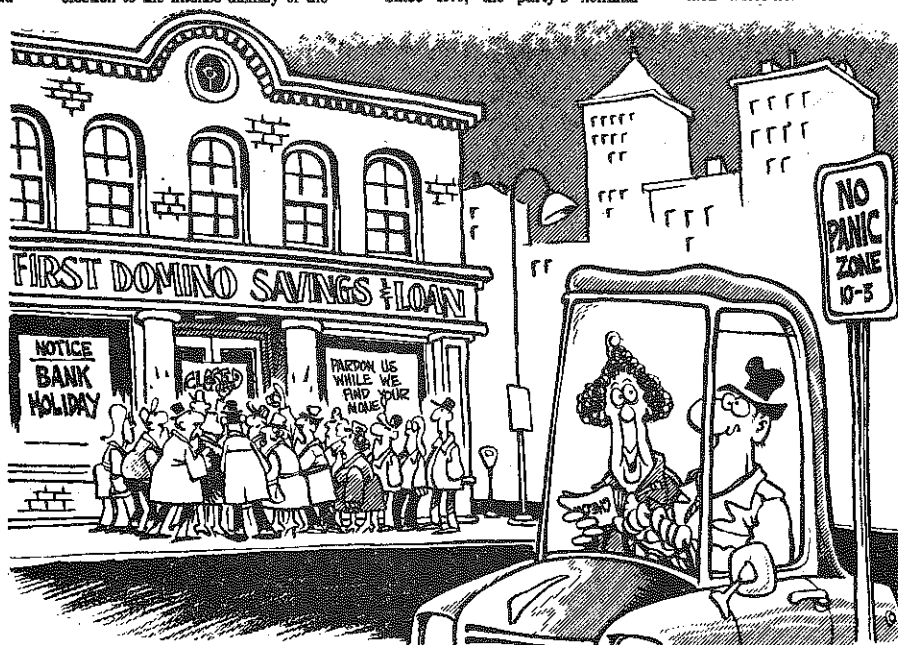

"But no joke is forever, even the best jokes, like guests, can overstay their welcome."

THE TEN FUNDAMENTALS OF MODERN STATISM

1. The first duty of every state is to protect the state, not the people.
2. Other states are occasional enemies; the people are the continual enemies.
3. The purpose of taxation is confiscation, control, the redistribution of wealth, control, the support of civil government, and control.
4. All steps to increase state power must be done in the name of The People, but the people are to be used and stripped of freedom in the process.
5. Freedom is dangerous, controls are good.
6. Freedom must be redefined; it is the right to be morally loose and irresponsible, but Christian morality is social slavery.
7. Children are the property of the state.
8. The two great sources of evil are the church and the family.
9. The only world is the world; there is no God, no heaven, nor hell.
10. Anything the state operates or does is good, in any and all spheres, education, war, peace, spending, and so on. What is "public" or statist is good; what is "private" is bad.

Nudist Movement Hits Bottom

NEW YORK—Among nudists these days, the word is: "Grin and bear it."

With the nation becoming increasingly conservative, nudists find fewer and fewer communities willing to sanction their activities. The Event, a major nudist publication, has even called for President Ronald Reagan's defeat in November's election, claiming that his administration has had "disastrous results" on naturists.

In calling for his defeat, the magazine points out that 16 out of 17 nude beaches in Florida have been closed, that nudists all over America are regularly convicted of "lewdness" and "disorderly conduct," and that high courts have invariably upheld these convictions.

Naked Aggression

She further warns her unclad colleagues that Reagan's reelection would give him a chance to appoint several more conservative Supreme Court Judges, who might encourage police to show even more naked hostility toward nudists.

Nudists are somewhat puzzled by their unpopularity, since so many consider themselves deeply religious people. True, magazines such as The Event do carry plenty of advertisements for nude backpacking, "canuding down the Delaware" and learning French without clothes. But there are also ads for The Christian Nudist Journal and for seminars helping parents to cope with the religious problems of nudism.

Yet the fact remains: Nudists are on the run. A severe setback to the movement was the recent announcement that a Houston apartment complex, billed as the world's largest "clothing-optional residential community," was reversing its policy and ordering all nudist tenants to either put their clothes back on or clear out.

No Bones About It

Nudists are furious because it was Club Fieldstone's announcement of its pro-nudist policy that helped fill the 270-unit complex, but due to community pressure, the management of the complex has abandoned the policy after four months, saying that it is "no longer feasible."

Inflation is like a traffic jam, because by the time you realize you are in it, it is too late to stay out of it or to get out of it.

More Ugly Truth

The struggle for power intensifies. Contenders for the city council in Garfield, Ohio, came to blows in an argument over vandalized campaign posters. The incumbent came off better in the battle; the challenger sustained a nine-stitch cut, broken finger, and possible sprained wrist. The incumbent absorbed a minor cut and a bump of some unspecified severity. Ohio law is unclear as to whether these fight results are sufficient to determine the outcome of the race or whether further scuffles will be required until a decisive knockout is achieved.

Pure Reason

From a CIA memo introduced as evidence in the William Westmoreland/CBS libel suit: "Have we gone beyond the bounds of reasonable dishonesty?"

—The Progressive

Dr. Saul Cohen, a Maine cardiologist who acts as a White House consultant, shot a 320-pound black bear and presented the pelt to Ronald Reagan "as a show of my admiration for him and as a demonstration of his concern for the environment."

Curfew Caper

At Beijing University in China, 2,000 students marched Dec. 10-11 while others put up wall posters and threw torches out of dorm windows, protesting a new 11:00 p.m. curfew. The university not only forces students to live seven to a dorm room, but assigns spies to report on "troublemakers," who are then exiled to remote areas. Students were taking a big risk to join the protest. Beijing University was a site of great student activity during the 100 Flowers Campaign in 1957 which Mao subsequently crushed.

The Ugly Truth

THE IRS rammed home its message of who's boss, much to the dismay of a witless would-be philanthropist. A California woman decided to donate her income tax overpayment to the federal government. The IRS sent her paperwork to sign in order to claim her $60 refund. Since she didn't want the refund, she declined to sign the papers. This attempted benevolence netted the woman a $77 fine. It's an object lesson that you pay what the Internal Revenue Service says you owe, no more, no less.
