I'm running for President as a Libertarian and I'm in it to win it, to win this nomination, because the party must be represented by the maximum ideals for liberty: anarcho-capitalism and decentralization/localization.

My fellow candidates believe in the minimalist State and its monopoly on violence to guarantee rights and keep the peace. But why would anyone expect the State to do these things? The State is the worst infringer of rights and the greatest source of violence that exists. And it cannot be otherwise. The State violates the non-aggression principle, by definition.

But more than this, I'm in it to win it because I believe that I am the candidate who best understands the current threats to liberty that beset us.

Yes, the usual suspects: the Federal Reserve, war imperialism, the proxy wars, the alphabet agencies, the regulatory regime, the security state, the military industrial complex, etc., but also the censorship industrial complex, the threat of global governance, climate catastrophism, the WHO pandemic treaty, "Disease X," and so forth. I've written about all these issues and more, most recently in Newsweek but also in best-selling books.

It isn't enough to have excellent policy prescriptions. Of course, policies matter, but for too long, the LP has ignored the fact that politics is downstream from culture. The winning candidate must also know how to counter the statist narratives that end up garnering support for the policies that threaten liberty.

If the candidate fell for the propaganda during the most liberty-infringing crises in modern history, the Covid regime, or ignored it, or if they've parroted the regime propaganda on Israel, like RFK, Jr., forget about it.

The broad electorate doesn't care who's served the Libertarian Party the longest — who's knocked on the most doors, etc. We don't need a party operative to lead the party. This isn't a nomination for class president. It's a nomination for the best representative of liberty.

Nor do we need a mere vote-getter. If we wanted mere a vote-getter, we would nominate RFK, Jr., God forbid. The argument against RFK, Jr. is simple. He's a statist who believes the State is the solution to all our problems, whereas you and I know that the State the problem itself.

This is a nomination for who is best positioned to conduct a 50-state and even international messaging campaign, and who isn't afraid to tell the truth. I've been on the some of the biggest stages there are, including on Tucker Carlson, several times.

But we won't go anywhere if we lead with cardboard cut-out patent cliché libertarian platitudes as applied to nothing.

And we don't want to nominate a Rip van Winkle, someone whose messaging could have been delivered in a time capsule from 20 to 30 years ago.

We need an original thinker, a bold speaker, and a fearless leader. It's time to #RecTheRegime! Let's go!

Thank you for your support!
