

• ATTORNEY GENERAL •

NATALIE CLARK

Crime is one of Natalie's greatest concerns, and she would work to end the war on drugs, which causes much of the violent crime in our state. She would give taxpayers a stronger voice in allocating state revenues, and would empower individuals to enforce their own rights -- such as claims to child support -- rather than turning such matters over to the state.

Natalie earned her law degree at Marshall-Wythe School of Law at William and Mary University, and an advanced degree at Columbia University. She has twice been the Libertarian candidate for Attorney General and is an attorney and professor of law at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb.

Natalie has been a Libertarian for 20 years. What brought her to the party, she says, was that "I heard a Libertarian speaker who was a politician -- and made sense!"

• SECRETARY OF STATE •

JOSEPH SCHREINER

As Secretary of State, Chicagoan Joseph Schreiner would develop measures to safeguard the privacy of individuals -- something he believes is threatened by computerized databases and information sharing, particularly between governmental agencies. He wants to privatize mass transit in Chicago and Northern Illinois, and end the practice of using driver's license suspension as a penalty for unrelated offenses.

Joseph has been active politically at the local level, working against discrimination and serving as a Cook County election judge, pollwatcher and registrar. He says, "I was active in the Democratic Party, but have abandoned it because it has abandoned any true allegiance to personal liberty."

Joseph has worked for 17 years in the statistical and analytical computer software industry.

• STATE COMPTROLLER •

MIKE GINSBERG

Michael's campaign begins with a simple, startling fact: the state government is Illinois' largest purchaser of goods and services. Next year the state budget will increase by 14% to $33 billion -- equal to the combined gross revenues of United Airlines and Motorola! Michael believes these increases are unnecessary and intolerable.

Michael proposes competitive bidding for all state contracts. This could reduce annual recurring costs by at least 15%. He would freeze all so-called "discretionary" spending, eliminate redundant jobs, and bring state employees' compensation and productivity in line with their corporate counterparts.

Michael is a graduate of Southern Illinois University and holds an MBA. He is currently employed by a major airline and currently lives in Palatine.

• STATE TREASURER •

KATI KROENLEIN

As State Treasurer, Kati will work to limit the role of government to its essential tasks; make government more cost-efficient and productive; and reduce spending and taxes.

A resident of East Peoria, Kati has been an accountant for 15 years. Among her chief concerns is educational reform -- she believes that parents should have more authority in their children's education.

• UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS •
TRUSTEES

KIRBY CUNDIFF

Kirby Cundiff is currently working toward his doctoral degree in physics at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. Intimately familiar with University policies, Kirby would "make student participation in non-educational services voluntary, and eliminate the 'refundable fee' system. This would make the services more cost-effective and more responsive to student needs through competitive forces."

ROBIN MILLER

A resident of East Peoria, Robin holds a degree from Illinois Central College. "As troubleshooter for computer systems," he says, "I identify and solve problems. I believe these abilities, plus a healthy dose of skepticism about government benevolence, will serve the public interest well."

Robin is married and has two children.

JONI GARCIA

Joni is the mother of two children and is a strong supporter of both home education and of educational vouchers. She would seek to assure that Illinois parents and students have choices and alternatives in education.

*"Government is not reason;
it is not eloquence;
it is force.
Like fire,
it is a dangerous servant
and a fearful master."*

-- George Washington

ARE YOU A LIBERTARIAN?

A Libertarian believes...

- People have the right to live their lives as they wish without government interference, so long as they don't violate the rights of others;
- Each individual has the right and the responsibility to control their own body, behavior and property, and government's only role is to help people protect themselves against force or fraud;
- Government at all levels is too large, too expensive, woefully inefficient, arrogant, intrusive -- and downright dangerous to itself and citizens.

The spirit of the Founding Fathers. The Libertarian Party was organized in 1971 by people who realized that the politicians, supported by everyone who wants something from the government, had strayed far from America's libertarian foundation, with disastrous results.

A real change. The Democrats want much more government. The Republicans are for a little more government. If you think government is already too large, too expensive and too meddlesome, the Libertarian Party is the only party that agrees with you!

- Are you hearing nothing new from the "Republicrats" -- except new laws to restrict your freedom, new ways to take your money and spend it?
- Have you had it up to here with unlimited government?

There IS an alternative!

• GOVERNOR •
DAVID KELLEY

David Kelley, a native of Rockford and a long-time Libertarian, knows that the other parties' "solutions" to crime -- more taxes, police, prisons and gun control -- have been the same for two decades...and they're just not working. He has the courage to propose a new direction: as Governor, he would privatize the prison system; employ prisoners in revenue-producing activities; train and license law-abiding citizens to carry firearms; and end the drug prohibition that wastes billions, makes criminals of otherwise law-abiding Illinoisans, and diverts law-enforcement resources from truly dangerous crime.

Dave sees educational issues as key to the future of Illinois. To provide an alternative to failing government schools, he'll institute a voucher system for education, eliminate the State Board of Education, and work towards self-funding of local school districts. To return authority to local governments, he'll start eliminating the state income tax and remove the burden of state mandates on local government units. He also proposes to legalize and deregulate gambling.

Dave has lived in Illinois all his life. Currently a construction management consultant, he has twice run for alderman in Rockford, and he's a former Libertarian candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

• LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR •
ROBERT MOLDENHAUER

A resident of Rock Island, Bob is in politics because of his "sincere desire to return to Constitutional government." Like all Libertarians, he knows that Illinois' constantly growing government has far exceeded its Constitutional limitations.

Bob opposes the "RICO" laws, which allow police to seize property without judicial review, and often without formal criminal charges every being made. He would work to end legal penalties for drug use and other consensual "crimes"; require that new legislation contain a sunset provision, putting a time limit on government agencies and activities and eliminating obsolete statutes and agencies; privatize many government functions, including schools; and reduce -- and eventually eliminate -- the state income tax.

A graduate of Augustana College with degrees in accounting and political science, Bob has long been active in local politics. He edits an anti-censorship newsletter called "First Amendment."
