TRYON LEADS IN CALAVERAS COUNTY RACE

By Bill Evers

As of presstime, Libertarian Tom Tryon is leading by one vote, 1309 to 1308, in the electoral cliffhanger of the year for California Libertarians. Tryon is a candidate for the nonpartisan office of Calaveras County supervisor.

Initial returns mechanically tabulated on Nov. 6 showed Tryon losing by 20 votes. The first recount by hand had the candidates dead even. A second recount on Nov. 10 has put Tryon narrowly in the lead.

Additional recounts and legal hurdles lie ahead. Final certification of the winner may take as long as two weeks.

Tryon is a 39-year-old rancher, who lives in Angels Camp--setting of Mark Twain's famed fictional frog-jumping contest.

He placed second in a four-way race in the June 5 election. The Nov. 6 election was a runoff between Tryon and the other leading candidate.

The main issue in the campaign was land-use controls. Tryon told the Activist that he forthrightly argued for "property rights and free market processes" as the solution to land use problems.

Tryon explained to voters that those who want scenic preservation, design review, historical preservation, or other land use controls should seek out subdivisions that offer such controls on a private property basis.

During the campaign, Tryon attacked governmental land-use planning as elitist, counterproductive, discriminatory, and infringing on self-expression. These comments were delivered with special authority since Tryon is a member of the county planning commission.

Tryon comes from a pioneer Calaveras County family. His great-grandfather came to the region in 1848 seeking gold. That ancestor went on to become sheriff of Calaveras and Alpine counties in 1863.

Tryon has a B.A. in economics from the University of California at Berkeley and a business degree from the University of Chicago. He is married with one child and is an Army veteran.

Tryon first learned about the Libertarian Party shortly after Jimmy Carter's election in 1976. He became more familiar with the LP as a result of newspaper stories about the 1978 Ed Clark for Governor campaign. He attended the summer 1980 Cato summer school at Stanford.

If Tryon is certified as the winner, he will represent district four, covering southeastern Calaveras County.

Persons wishing to assist in paying off the campaign's debts should send checks to Tom Tryon for Supervisor, P. O. Box 1177, Angels Camp, CA 95222.

BURNOUT:

LET'S NOT LET IT HAPPEN THIS YEAR

by Jorge Amador

(CA '84 Editor's Note: Mr. Amador is the Editor of Libertarian Penn, the newsletter of the Libertarian Party of Pennsylvania (LPP). Although this article was really written to be published before Election Day, and although right now the Libertarian Party does have "permanent" ballot status in California, we still have a great deal of work to do to gain freedom in California, and Mr. Amador's excellent article hits home here too.

Remember, as you read this article, that our push for 2 percent in at least one statewide race in California comes again in 1986. Let's take this article to heart and start working now to educate Californians for 1986!)

Another election is coming up, and with the campaign that precedes it comes also, to many Libertarians, the hope that "this will be it," that this will finally be the year we break out of the minor-party mold and obtain enough votes to get recognized officially as a ballot-qualified party in Pennsylvania.

Few things would be more welcome than to be finally freed of the drudgery of having to expend thousands of dollars and man-hours collecting multitudinous autographs just so we can have our party's name printed on the election ballot.

As a veteran of three ballot drives myself (one as an extremely uncomfortable signature gatherer, two as a supporting actor), few aspects of partisan Libertarian activity would please me more than not to have this biennial ritual take place again.

Therefore, I can understand the eagerness of some, perhaps many, LPP members to push for the 2 percent or so of the Pennsylvania statewide vote that we'll need in the 1984 election in order to get automatic ballot status for 1986.

I can see how and why they would want to invest a lot of their activist capital in helping one of our statewide candidates do so. I comprehend their great interest in giving it all to achieve this goal this year.

However, I have also witnessed this very phenomenon occur with others who are no longer LPP activists.

For several months during the ballot drive and then the campaign, they would work like dynamos, totally dedicated to the goal of getting the LPP that elusive "permanent" ballot status, amazing the rest of us with their apparent commitment to, and enthusiasm for, the progress of liberty.

Then, when the vote totals came in and it became apparent that the voting public had not embraced the LP in the numbers they had expected, their enthusiasm dropped markedly, dampened by the disappointment of not having achieved the goal they had set.

Some of these people, prominent activists in the LPP only a year ago, have done nothing of note for either the Party or the movement since.

What happened? Their goal was unrealistic, arbitrary. They expected a much faster rate of public adoption of Libertarian ideas than could realistically have been expected.

One thing they forgot was that people do not come to agree with Libertarian proposals (or therefore decide to vote Libertarian) overnight or even during the course of one campaign, or two or three. For libertarianism to spread and gain support, sustained and continuous educational effort and outreach activity are necessary--not only just a couple of fall months' frenzied efforts every year or two.

Only through frequent contact with Libertarian views will people learn them and acquaint themselves with both the concepts and the movement, to the point that they no longer 1) view libertarians as merely a tiny, isolated bunch of "kooks" who run a few hapless candidates in some elections; or 2) consider our views as far-out, unheard-of rhetoric. Since our ideas are superior, in this case familiarity breeds respect.

Education is the other element these burned-out activists forgot. In their zeal to attain the desired vote totals, they paid little attention to spreading the ideas of liberty, and at times even the label "Libertarian."

I still remember one of them proudly describing his success at gathering signatures by telling unsuspecting passers-by that he was petitioning for "my aunt." The emphasis on the race for a statewide office was often laid on the candidate's "independence" rather than on the substance of his proposals.

One ex-activist who, when he was a student, told me he thought introducing Libertarian ideas to his fellow students was a "waste of time," later objected to an education-oriented Congressional candidate's brochure on the grounds that "nobody would read it."

If nobody will read Libertarian literature and Libertarians will not, like him, attempt to spread Libertarian ideas, then how the heck do we expect to gain support--and obtain ballot status, let alone victory? What are we in this for? I can think of a lot more interesting hobbies to take up, if we're just in it to play politics.

Meaningful electoral progress, should we choose to continue on that path, will be one measure of our educational progress. It cannot precede public support for Libertarian ideas; instead it depends on this.

I want to "win" as much as anybody, but "winning" to me is achieving freedom, not making ballot status this year or even garnering more votes just because our candidates are female or "independent" or "better qualified" to make decisions for other people.

My sense of achievement and satisfaction grows as I see support for Libertarianism grow, and I see that happening as Libertarian ideas get more attention in the media and everyday discussion. It does not depend on voters' deciding to dump the present politicians for an alternative that they do not understand and are likely to reject if a Libertarian officeholder then attempts to legislate it. It depends (and this is what I mean by "meaningful" electoral progress) on voters' voting for Libertarians because they agree with our ideas, not because they wish to protest in a vague, general way.

I am in this movement to achieve liberty. Liberty will not come about overnight. We have a lot of education to do yet before enough people vote to make us get ballot status or win elections for Libertarian ideas. Therefore, I am in this for the long haul.

The question I wish to present you with at this point is, "If the vote tallies come in and they show we didn't make ballot status, will you still work for liberty?" I know I will.

Or will you feel disappointed or "burned out" after the election? I know I won't, and I hope you aren't either. There is too much at stake to let that happen.

THANKS!

California Activist Editor Mary Gingell, and Circulation Manager Karen Huffman would like to thank the following volunteers from the Santa Clara County LP who have helped with the collating, folding, stapling, labeling, sorting, bundling, etc., during July, August, September and October: Frank Ali, Dale Burrow, Don Cormier, Dante DeAmicis, Ron Emslie, Brian Esterson, Cary Kunz, and Sam Milan.

Special commendations go to Elaine Fossati, for folding the insert for the October issue, to Jim Clark of CC Graphics, for cutting the registration cards to the right length on his electric cutter for the September issue, and to Howard and Janet Underwood for driving to Oakland and back to pick up the newsletter from the printer.

Special thanks to Mark Ross and Michael Tejada of GRT Book Printing, in Alameda County, for printing the Activist free of charge since 1983!

Our personal thanks to Jeff Smith, who braves the wilds of the Post Office for those of us who dread that part of the job most of all!

DORNAN BIDS FOR LP VOTERS

Republican Congressional candidate Robert Dornan (38th District, CA), in a close and expensive race against incumbent Jerry Patterson, sent a misleading mailing to registered Libertarian voters in his district.

The mailing consisted of two letters--one from Republican Congressman Ron Paul of Texas, the other from Reagan White House staffer Dana Rohrbacher.

The letter from Paul was addressed, "Dear fellow Libertarian" (note the capital "L"--this falsely implies that Paul is a member of the Libertarian Party, which he is not, nor has he ever been).

The mailing also falsely portrays Dornan as a libertarian (small "l") when in fact he is a Moral Majority conservative who favors military intervention abroad and massive public works programs at home.

Ironically, shortly after winning the election, Dornan sued Patterson for $10 million for supposedly misrepresenting Dornan's positions in his (Patterson's) campaign literature.

STATE EXCOM TO MEET IN BAKERSFIELD

The Libertarian Party of California Executive Committee will meet in Bakersfield on November 17 and 18. High on the agenda will be planning and budgeting for 1985.

Saturday events will be held in the Hilton Inn conference room at 3535 Rosedale Highway, Bakersfield. The Sunday meeting will be held at the Red Lion Inn, 3100 Camino Del Rio Court.

The LPC's Membership Committee will kick off the weekend with a Membership workshop from 11 AM to 1 PM. All LPC regions are encouraged to send at least one representative to this meeting to help brainstorm with other regional representatives about how to increase regional membership, to keep your members happy, and to make sure they renew.

From 1 PM to 5:30 PM on Saturday, the Fundraising/Membership Committee, Budget Committee, and Contract Services Committee will meet. These meetings are open to all LPC members, and Executive Committee representatives are particularly urged to attend these preliminary meetings in order to be fully prepared for Sunday's meeting of the full Executive Committee.

Saturday night will be party time at the home of Steve and Sandy Martin. Besides the opportunity to meet with Executive Committee members when they "let their hair down," entertainment will be provided by magician Peter Graves.

Sunday's events at the Red Lion include credentialling at 8:30 AM sharp, with the meeting of the full Executive Committee beginning promptly at 9 AM. A luncheon will be available for about $11, and will feature magician Peter Graves to lighten up the day.

Hotel rates for the weekend are quite reasonable: Red Lion single $60, double $68, the nearby Rodeway Inn single $43, double $46. The best nearby deal of the weekend, recommended by Kern County Executive Committee Rep. Bob Gaede, is the Hilton, with singles for $37-$47 and doubles for $45-$55. Motel 6, although several miles away from the meeting site, has singles for $16.95 and doubles for $20.95.

Call Kern County LP Chair Dan Lucas, at (805) 366-6660, for more information about the weekend, and to make reservations for Sunday's luncheon.
